The best way to hide is in plain sight. In this politically-charged and candid debut, we follow the chronicles of an undocumented immigrant speaker from the Philippines over a twenty-year span as she grows up in the foreign and forbidding landscape of America. "It stands far apart from most first books, and from most books of autobiographical or narrative poetry, for the unpredictable vigor in its rhythmically irregular lines, especially in its depictions of youthful adventures." -- Stephen Burt,Â The Los Angeles Times "Through her variety of lines, of old and new forms, and of voices adopted and inhabited, Joseph, herself Filipina-American, does justice to the raw emotions around immigration with verve." -- Publishers Weekly "As she guides us through constant fearfulness...and unimaginable hurt...Joseph blends everyday anxieties with deeper ones, avoiding outright reportage for smarter inflection. The tensions of visiting the immigration lawyer's office, for instance, are seen in the mad drive away. VERDICT: A gifted writer's view on an all-American issue." -- Barbara Hoffert,Â Library JournalÂ

From "Ivan, Always Hiding":Â I strained for the socket as you pulled me, bare legs against your legsÂ in the windowless dark. The room, snuffed out,Â could have been no larger than a freight car, no smaller than a box van;Â we couldn't tell anymore, the glints in the shellacked floor, too,Â were dulled.Â This is like death,Â you said, always joking. I slid my head into the crook of your neck,Â and didn't disagree.

A simply stunning debut collection by a poet to watch. Joseph tells a profoundly American story, that of an adolescent immigrant, one who discovers that she is undocumented. Poems about the desire to drive, dream, and live without fear punctuate this collection. The poems themselves are exquisitely composed and edited, revealing the time and attention the poet takes to both form and narrative. A must-buy poetry collection for anyone invested in American poetry.

This collection is inviting and accessible to poets and non poets alike.

An amazing collection of poems!
